Definitions

business letter A letter inquiring about a business matter.

compare and contrast The writer compares ideas to convince the reader that one is better than another.

compound sentence A sentence made up of two independent clauses. The connecting word in a compound sentence is called a coordinating conjunction.

coordinating conjunction

1. A conjunction that joins words, phrases, and clauses of equal value. Examples: and, but, or, so, nor, for yet.
2. When a coordinating conjunction joins two independent clauses, there is a comma before the conjunction.

essay (EHsay) noun, verb A piece of writing that gives your thoughts about a subject. It is usually not as detailed as a report.

however (houEHvur) Can be used instead of the phrase "on the other hand..." or the word "but."

independent clause A clause that expresses a complete thought and can stand alone as a sentence. It has a subject and a verb.

letter to the editor A letter to the newspaper stating your opinion.

order of importance The writer may begin with the most important idea and move to the least important idea.

personal letter A letter to a friend about your personal life.

report (reepawrt) noun, verb A long, detailed essay or piece of writing about something you have learned about.

review (reevyoo) noun, verb, adjective An article recommending or critiquing something such as a movie or car.

spatial order This form of paragraph organization shows how things are arranged in a space or scene.

therefore (thEHrfawr) As a consequence; as a result of that.

writing purpose The intention of or reason for a specific form of writing (e.g., personal letter, letter to the editor, review, poem, report, narrative).
